

2024 Impact Snapshot

48.47 %

of the 229 survivors Restore NYC served had never realized their experience met the legal definition of trafficking until an advocate identified it.

Self-recognition Gap.

Sometimes survivors in active trafficking situations don't realize their situation meets the legal definition of trafficking until a trained professional points it out. This gap underscores why public education—and trauma-informed screening by service providers—remains critical.